22nd December, 1988

Dear Bill,

It was good to talk with you again on the telephone earlier today and, as we discussed, I am pleased to be sending you a copy the Will Maclean catalogue.

You will see from page 78 of the catalogue that he is already represented in a number of collections. In early 1990, he is due to have a large one-man exhibition in London and Rudi Fuchs - perhaps the most forward-thinking museum director presently curating in Europe - is planning a touring museum retrospective of his work.

The construction wall-pieces are the most characteristic works and, I think, his strongest. In any event, I would be most interested to hear your reaction to the works illustrated in this catalogue.

Enclosed also is my sticker for the Conroy painting, which I would be grateful if you could fix to the back for the sake of provenance.

When I am back in the office after Christmas I shall speak to you again about Alison Watt. In the mean-time, I hope you have a happy Christmas and wish you all the best for 1989.

Yours sincerely,

JAY JOPLING
